Notice sheet for 31st May-6th June 2026

The Rev's Ramblings

How do you find talking to someone who is clearly not listening?

You can tell when they are just waiting for their turn to speak, or when they have already decided what they think before you even finish your sentence.

On the other hand, some people never really say anything about themselves at all.

They keep everyone at a distance and act like they can manage everything alone. Most of us probably move between those two extremes at different times.

Jesus' words in Matthew 28.16-20 stand out to me:

"I am with you always." The idea of Jesus as an ever-present friend is comforting, but it is also challenging.

It makes me think about the way we relate not only to friends, but to people in general, and even to God.

Are we open to listening, or do we assume we already know best? Do we leave room for other people to speak honestly into our life?

Sometimes we avoid difficult conversations because we want to stay in control. Other times we keep our worries to ourselves because we assume nobody really wants to hear them.

Maybe that attitude can affect faith as well.

If we close ourselves off from others, we might also miss ways that Jesus speaks through them.

Sometimes what Jesus says may be encouraging, but sometimes it may be uncomfortable or challenging. A real friend does not simply agree with everything we say.

Jesus stays with us, but he also calls us to grow and change.
